Hundreds of people seeking employment attended Commissioner Sandy Murman's South County Job Fair at the Hillsborough Community College SouthShore Campus on Friday. Nearly 40 employers participated in the free event, including Amazon, Spectrum, Publix and more. After the job fair, a virtual job fair was held to allow job seekers to apply for employment online at a special web page through CareerSource. That online job fair, which was in partnership with the Hillsborough County Public Libraries, was from 1-6 p.m., said Murman, who spearheaded the event and attended.

Hillsborough County will file suit against opioid makers

Hillsborough County plans to file a lawsuit next week against companies that manufacture opioid drugs, alleging that aggressive marketing of painkillers worsened the opioid crisis. The county joins a number of other local governments nationwide that have brought similar suits against opioid makers.
